Aboriginal Legal Service NSW/ACT (ALS)

Location: NSW, State-wide (approximately 24 offices across NSW and ACT)

How we help

The ALS Care and Protection team provides culturally safe, expert legal and non-legal assistance.

Who we help

The Care and Protection team helps Aboriginal women, men, parents and grandparents, uncles, aunties and children with child protection issues.

What we do

The team helps clients understand what the Child Protection Agencies are saying and why a particular outcome has occurred. It also helps families understand the court process.

ALS challenges the system so that Aboriginal families can get their children back and so that children's connection to their families and culture can be maintained.

The ALS can be help if:

- A care application has been made
- A child was removed a long time ago
- You want to change an order made by the court
- You need help deciding whether you can fight a matter or not
- Your family needs a support plan now, or into the future

Accessing the service: ALS will provide some ad hoc services but for more complex matters will require proof of Aboriginality.

Legal assistance is provided subject to a means, merit and conflict test, as well as the availability of ALS Care and Protection lawyers.

VICTORIA

Children's Court services

Marram-Ngala Ganbu (“we are one” in the Woiwurrung language), is part of the Family Division of Victorian Children’s Court in Broadmeadows and was developed in response to the over-representation of Aboriginal children and families in the Victorian child protection system. The pilot program was launched in July 2016, and aims to improve outcomes for Koori children and families involved in child protection proceedings.

In 2019, the Children’s Court of Victoria commissioned an independent evaluation (available here). The evaluation identified sufficient evidence that Marram-Ngala Ganbu is achieving its intended short-to-medium-term outcomes. In 2021, the program was expanded to Shepparton.

Marram-Ngala Ganbu (“MNG”)

Location: Victoria, Children’s Court at Broadmeadows and Shepparton (2 locations)

About: A weekly hearing day at the Family Division of the Children’s Court of Victoria at Broadmeadow aimed to improve outcomes for Indigenous children and families involved in child protection proceedings in north-east Melbourne

- Indigenous staff led the design, implementation and day-to-day function of the program
- Staff in the court have a high level of cultural competence
- Provides referrals to Aboriginal-controlled support services in the region
- Hearings are informal, conducted in more collaborative way, sit at round table

- Families are encouraged to bring Elders and other people from the community to provide support and input to hearings.
- A Koori Services Coordinator and Koori Family Support Worker coordinate the hearing list and assist family members in obtaining legal representation and understand the court process. There is also a Koori Conciliation Conference Convenor

The planned extension of Marram-Ngala Ganbu to the Shepparton Children's Court in 2020 was delayed due to the pandemic. Is planned to occur in early 2021

Accessing the service: Every family with an Indigenous child that is listed at Broadmeadows Children's Court is heard in MNG unless they wish to opt out.

Children's Court services

In November 2017, the Interim Statutory Review of the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) made four recommendations relating to the improvement of the protection and care process. The idea of a therapeutic court was further strengthened in 2018, when the Minister for Child Protection, Women's Interests, Prevention of Family and Domestic Violence and Community Services visited the Koori Court at Broadmeadows Children's Court in Victoria. A pilot program was proposed for a separate list, initially for Indigenous families but then open to all families, which aims to take a more therapeutic response to care and protection proceedings.

In 2019, a Working Group was set up to explore the implementation of a specialist list with therapeutic elements for protection and care.

On 10 July 2020, the Perth Children's Court commenced the pilot.

Pilot Program – separate list for children in need of care and protection

Location: Perth

About: Aims to address the issues that cause families to come before the court in a holistic, therapeutic and culturally informed manner.

Representatives from the Aboriginal community and community-based agencies will be able to attend the court at the same time and can be heard.

Accessing the service: Pilot was originally opened for Indigenous families but now serves families from all backgrounds.

Families can be referred by the magistrate in the protection and care list (Court 5) OR by solicitors if all parties agree to use the pilot.

Non-government organisations

Djinda Services (Women's Legal Service WA)

Location: Perth

About: Djinda Service is the specialist Perth Aboriginal Family Violence Prevention Legal Service run in partnership with Relationships Australia WA.

The Service provides free specialist legal and non-legal support to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women in the Perth metropolitan area who have experienced or are experiencing family violence and/or sexual assault.

Legal assistance is provided in the form of legal information and advice, limited court representation, advocacy and assistance, referrals and community legal education in the areas of:

- identifying and responding to family violence;
- family violence restraining orders;
- children's protection and care (DCP matters);
- family law (parenting related matters, some divorce); and
- criminal injuries compensation (where it relates to family violence or sexual assault).

Accessing the service:

In order to access the service, the respondent must be an Aboriginal woman involved in a child protection matter who at some point in their life had been a victim of family or sexual violence.

Women can make an appointment by calling (08) 9200 2202.

Agencies or service providers (such as Legal Aid WA and ALS) wanting to refer a client should complete a Djinda Service Referral Form which can be found on the Webpage.

Legal appointments will usually take place at the Women's Legal Service WA office in Perth.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

Children's Court services (Youth Court of South Australia)

The equivalent to the Children's Court of New South Wales is the Youth Court of South Australia ("Youth Court of SA").

Youth Aboriginal Justice Officers

Location: Youth Court of SA, Adelaide

About: The Youth Court of SA has two Youth Aboriginal Justice Officers ("YAJOs") situated in the Youth Court Registry. The YAJOs are responsible for the development, delivery, monitoring and review of a culturally sensitive service to Aboriginal youth, families and the Aboriginal Community.

The YAJOs also assist the Court by helping Aboriginal youth and their families to communicate effectively and directly with the presiding judicial officer, to ensure that informed decisions can be made regarding the care and guidance of Aboriginal youth.

Accessing the service: Youth Aboriginal Justice Officer Trevor Raynor can be contacted at youthcourt@courts.sa.gov.au.

AUSTRALIAN CAPITAL TERRITORY

Children's Court services

Name: Care and Protection Intensive List (CPIL)

Location: Children's Court Division of the ACT Magistrates Court

About: Alternative process to the usual care and protection proceedings. The CPIL provides court supervised intensive management and therapeutic support of parents, to allow them to address their challenges with alcohol and other drugs, parenting capacity, family violence and other issues which affect their ability to parent their children safely.

The program ensures case finalisation and permanency decisions are made by the sitting CPIL Magistrate to reduce the uncertainty of making permanent care orders, whilst ensuring the process is as least protracted as possible.

Parents will be intensively managed by the court and supporting clinical team throughout a therapeutic program over the period of approximately 12 months. On completion or exit from the program orders will be made in the best interest of the children or young people.

Accessing the service:
